This book has been an INVALUABLE resource to both myself, my daughter, and her groom, as well as to her sisters whom will someday follow in her footsteps. Ann thinks of everything, except possibly the decorations themselves. Mom, if you want to avoid a ~bridezilla~ get your daughter this book. Ann also thought of that, as she reminds (in a MOST loving & tactful way, usually) the bride of all the hard work everyone else is doing for her, and lets her in on what she should be doing for herself as well. Daughter, do you want your mom involved or not? This book ALSO addresses how to tactfully ask for help, decline help, accept help, and have a beautiful happy time while you do it! Besides the extremely accurate & well-thought out lists & advice, she preps the bride, the groom, and yes, even the mothers, for the big event. There is everything from what you will need to take to the temple, how to successfully manage a reception, when to order the cake, & why (or why not) accepting help is a good idea, to a count-down timeline for the event. And every single area on the list has it's own advice section. This book is specifically written with the middle-class LDS, temple-going bride in mind. She helps you out with temple scheduling, getting the dress, securing a photographer & gives you advise on that final night! She even addresses different types of brides ( are you bride A ~ controlling every detail, involved in everything, with a final say ~ bride B ~ involved but willing to accept others' work &/or efforts as acceptable ~ or bride C ~ you know you want to show up at the sealing & to the reception, but beyond that, nothing is clear, and by the way, did someone order a cake or something... cuz you know it wasn't you.) ~& how to work your plans accordingly.
